INTRODUCTION

Welcome to the enchanted lands of the Scotti and their mythical friends from the underworld, the Good People - the Neighbours - or as we now call them, the Fairies. The townland names and the people who inhabited them are a clear indication of the building block of society of then and now. The pointers contained in this book will leave a clear trail for those who wish to investigate further; unfortunately, we just do not have the time or the space.

The generations from early times rubbed uneasily with so called progress as they saw long held beliefs scattered, long established social structures eroded and life, in general, as they knew it mocked and discarded. In common with other societies there was the inherent belief that human existence, which had taken thousands of years to build and establish, was in the space of 50 or 60 years debunked, ridiculed and nearly forgotten.

The gigantic scientific advancement of the human race from the Second World War is mind boggling. However, people should, and must, realise that the older people got us to where we are today. Funny old world isn't it... Read on and enjoy...

After the ice retreated at the end of the last Ice Age, the first people arrived in Ireland about 10,000 years ago. These hunter-gatherers lived a nomadic life, depending on the landscape to provide them with animals and plants to forge an existence, and evidence shows some of them were living in the Dervock area. Stone Age man was busy shaping and chipping his weapons and tools on the very ground we now walk on. Various finds, including porcellanite, greenstone and mudstone axe heads, arrow heads and other implements, confirm that our hardy ancestors were indeed an industrious bunch of early entrepreneurs.

Hard volcanic granite and basalt rock pushes up through our ancient bogs to make the Antrim Plateau the shape that it is today. Limestone cliffs, sandpits and flint deposits mark the time when the sea covered most of the land mass. Old writings referred to the very ancient history of the high blue Antrim hills, where the people called the Scotti lived.

The people who went on to inhabit what is now Scotland, formerly Albany, forever linking, both by blood and family, two parts of these islands, only thirteen miles apart at their closest point. The clan, sept and family names, having crossed the stormy sea back and forth many times, and having changed alliances many times in the process, remain in the sinew and bone of us all - all the one children of the mists of time.

This is the land that forged our people into a hardy race of determined and resourceful folk. Dervock, like so many other clachans, has the river to thank for early and continued colonisation. The rivers, and now drained and forgotten lakes, of the area also provided for transport and security, while the heavily wooded land gave fuel and shelter. Wild game and fish were noted for their plenteousness.

The old tongue and the old ways, though burned by fire and sword, whether you are mindful of this or not, still remain, hence, the curious mixture of language that is now called, somewhat loosely, Ulster-Scots.

The old townlands and tribal boundaries are still here, and every effort must be made to record these, and whether practical or not, they should still be used. Look for a moment at some of the old words, scunnered, sheugh, wersh, hullabaloo, and many more; where would you find words so descriptive in any other language? Townlands, with names so romantic and descriptive, that sound so natural to the soul, names that leave you wondering who, in those so-called primitive times, had the ability to come up with names which sound so right.

Some early family names recorded in the area are heard no longer, with some being lost to the scourge of emigration, some others dying out through entirely natural causes while others now found have been added through inter-marriage with folk from other areas.

Townland names on the other hand are thankfully documented, although, thanks supposedly to better postal systems, nearly all are not spoken of as they used to be; and therein lies a great shame. When one talked of a Grey, a Simpson, a Hamilton, a Huey, or a Jameson, to help the folk to understand just who you were referring to, the townland name was often added. For example, a Simpson of say Mosside, though maybe genetically the same breeding, was not the Simpson's o' Chathamhall, or o' the Cloontys. Townland names, combined with surnames, linked that family to a particular place in people's minds, and in the local infrastructure of the area plan. Just as importantly, they also built a family tree of kinsfolk and relations, or if you like, a collection o' connections, which was handed down orally through the ages - for future generations to add to, or subtract from, as conditions dictated.

While the 'great and the good' had the means, and the scribes on hand, to write down history as they saw it, the history of the common people was recorded orally, and nearly every village had their local sage "who minded the time well." Though, it would be very wrong to believe their version any more than that of their masters, or the ministers and priests who did little to change what pleased their respective landlords when collating the passing times. Whilst remaining mindful of all these pitfalls, there is still a fantastic and colourful history about our areas and people to be recorded. Organisations, such as the B.B.C. with their Storytellers initiative, have started to do what should have been done years ago, while the old folk, with their stories, were plentiful. They have provided the training, and the means, for teams to collect, and record for posterity, the people's own stories.

Dervock and District Community Association, set up in 1984, has through the years, with the help of many volunteers, worked tirelessly to make their area a cleaner, happier place in which families can raise children and the older generation can live their well-earned rest in peace. This book is not intended to be an academic publication, but rather, a repository of names associated with the area over the years, snippets of history, a flavour of the language and a smattering of North Antrim humour.

We have drawn heavily on the Ordnance Survey Memoirs of Ireland, Volume 16, written in the 1830s to accompany the 6" Ordnance Survey. The Memoirs provide us with an amazing insight into the history of the area, in addition to being an additional source of local people's names. We have drawn names from various sources and have collated them into one publication and it is our hope that this booklet will provide a useful resource for anyone interested in the parish of Derrykeighan and the people who have lived here.

CHAPTER 1

THE PARISH OF DERRYKEIGHAN

THE PARISH OF DERRYKEIGHAN

Baronies, Parishes and Townlands, are divisions of land often referred to in Ireland's history. Baronies are sub-divided into smaller areas known as Parishes, which are further broken down into Townlands.

The largest of these, baronies, were created during the Tudor period in the 16th century and replaced the earlier system of cantreds formed in the 12th century by the Anglo-Normans. Civil parishes are units of land that have their origins in the old Gaelic territorial divisions of land. They were adopted by the Anglo-Normans in the 12th century and were formalised as land divisions in the 16th century. Civil parishes no longer correspond to the religious parishes, which are usually larger. Their use was gradually replaced by Poor Law Divisions in the 19th century, although they were not formally abolished.

A civil parish is sub-divided into smaller geographical divisions called townlands; typically, there are about 30 townlands in each parish. The use of townland names, once an important part of everyday life, has diminished in recent years and the names of our local townlands are in danger of being lost. In the not too distant past, the townland a person came from was often used to differentiate him from someone else with the same name.

The number of townlands in the parish of Derrykeighan varies from 31 to 38 depending on where you look or who you talk to. For the purpose of this publication we have taken it to include the 34 listed on page 9.

The Ordnance Survey Memoirs for the Parish of Derrykeighan not only describe the location of the parish, but give an interesting insight into the author's opinion of the local inhabitants. In September 1832, Lieutenant John Chaytor wrote:-

"It is situated in the barony of Lower Dunluce, near the northern extremity of the county of Antrim. It is bounded on the north by the parish of Billy and grange of Drumtullagh, on the east by the parish of Armoy, on the south east and south by the parishes of Loughguile and Ballymoney and on the west by the parish of Dunluce..."

"The Bush is the most considerable [river] in this neighbourhood ... It bounds the parish on the south and west ... The Blackwater river forms the northern boundary from the north east extremity of the parish to Dervock, when it passes through the town and joins the Bush ... Both of these rivers abound with salmon and trout..."

"The small town of Dervock, consisting of about 80 dwelling houses, is the principal in and situated near the centre of the parish ... About 1 and a half miles north west of Dervock, on the road to Bushmills, is situated a small village called Derrykeighan."

"The population of this parish is very considerable in proportion to its size. The greater part are said to be the descendants of Scottish settlers. They are an industrious and peaceable people, almost all Presbyterians. They speak the English language, but the dialect of the peasantry bears a great resemblance to that of the Scotch."

THE PARISH OF DERRYKEIGHAN

The parish of Derrykeighan lies in the Barony of Dunluce Lower and has an area of 161 acres, sub-divided into 34 townlands, each of which has its own story to tell. Much of the boundary of the parish is formed by the River Bush, the Stracam River and the Doughery Water.

THE TOWNLANDS

AGHANCROSSY

Area: 0.09 Square miles, 57.15 Acres

Origin: Irish achadh na croise, meaning 'field of the cross'
c1659 census – Aughnicrosie

Bordered by Ballyrathan Lower to the north west, Carncullagh Lower to the south east, Dervock to the south west and Urbal to the north east. Urbal lies in the parish of Billy.

The Liggots, a farming family, lived here for over one hundred years - Griffith's Valuation records the tenant as William Leggatt, and the landlord as George Macartney. Near the Liggot farm was a stone called the Gartan Stone. Gartan is an old Norse word for meeting place, and it was here the first Presbyterian Church was built.

It was at the top of Liggot's lane that Lord Macartney, Viscount Dervock, built the first boys' school and a number of years later his wife started a girls' school beside it.

In the small field beside the school lies the springs that once fed all the water pumps in Dervock. To carry the white bucket with its blue rim from the pump to your mother's or granny's house was a chore not loved by many. Many a young lad, with the help of a friend to carry and keep the bucket steady, earned a penny each or indeed a whole thrupenny bit.

The old Reformed Presbyterian manse, known as Fair View Cottage, stood on what was previously known as the Ballymoney Road, now named Knock Road.

The water pumps, commonly called cow tail pumps, were sited at the junction of Knowe Head Street and Church Street, Miller Avenue, the Loop Lane, and one at Ivy Cottage. There was also one on O'Brien's Green, beside Maggie Jane's public house, fronting onto Knowe Head Street, while the pump on Main Street was a lion turn handle.

The water pump located at the junction of the Loop Lane and the Ballymoney Road.

BALLYDIVITY

Area: 0.71 square miles, 453.79 acres

Origin: Irish Baile Mhic Duibheidigh meaning 'Duibheidigh's townland' or 'McDevitt's town'

c1659 Census spelling Ballydimdy

1669 Hearth Money Rolls spelling Ballyginity

Bordered by Ballyhibistock Lower to the south, Ballynarry Lower and Upper to the west, Islandahoe to the east, Cloonty to the east and Castlecat to the north. Cloonty and Castlecat lie in the parish of Billy.

Dating from 1760, Ballydivity House is one of the oldest gentleman's houses in the parish. The Moore family were early settlers at Ballydivity, the last of whom, James Moore, died in 1788, leaving no male heir. The estate passed to his nephew, James Stewart, grandson of Andrew Stewart who came to Ireland after the battle of Culloden in 1746, and the family name became Stewart-Moore. The Stewart-Moore family featured prominently in the history of County Antrim, with several serving as High Sheriff of the county. The OS Memoirs give the following description of Ballydivity House:-

"Ballydivity, the seat of Stewart Moore Esquire is situated in the townland of the same name and on the road from Dervock to Bushmills. The house is not modern, but it is roomy, comfortable, 2-storey ... It is perfectly plain in its architecture..."

The Annals of the Parish of Derrykeighan by Rev Hugh McNeill record an incident when a Captain Moore, owner of Ballydivity House and High Sheriff for County Antrim, attended a meeting in Antrim on the 7th June 1798. While he was away, Ballydivity House was searched by the United Irishmen, and Captain Moore's sword and silver plate were confiscated. Although, none of the immediate family was at home, an old woman who was in charge of the house, concealed herself under a table and watched the rebels hide two silver trays in a manure heap. After the plunderers had left, she quietly removed the items to another hiding-place, but some of the silver was carried away by opportunist and well-to-do farmers.

The sword was given to one of the rebels by the name of McElroy, of Dervock, a cooper by trade. It proved to be a fatal gift for McElroy as he was taken at Ballycastle with the sword in his possession and was duly shot.

BALLYHIBISTOCK LOWER (Ballyhivistock)

Area: 0.24 square miles, 155.7 acres

Origin: Irish Baile Thiobadoig meaning 'Tibistock's townland'

1669 Hearth Money Rolls spelling Ballyhibidoge

Bordered by Ballydivity to the north, Ballyhibistock Lower to the south, Ballynarry Upper to the west and Derrykeighan and Islandahoe to the east.

BALLYHIBISTOCK UPPER

Area: 0.21 square miles, 133.55 acres

Bordered by Ballyhibistock Lower to the north, Ballynarry Upper and Deepstown to the west, Derrykeighan and Islandahoe to the east and Carncoggy to the south.

Coleraine Chronicle, 5th May 1894, carried a story under the headline "Terrible Domestic Tragedy Near Dervock – A Farmer Shot Dead at His Own Fireside." Mr Lyle Gardiner, "an aged and highly-respected farmer," was killed when a gunshot was fired through the kitchen window. A local man, John Gilmore, "alleged to have been keeping company with the deceased's daughter," was arrested, and subsequently charged. Gilmore was described as belonging to "a most respectable family ... well brought up ... a well-behaved lad of good character." The jury recommended the lad to mercy and Coleraine Chronicle of 4th August 1894, reported "some influential signatures have been appended to the petition in favour of a reprieve for the condemned man ... The condemned man's father brought it to the widow of the murdered man and asked her to sign it, and she did so." However, the Lord Lieutenant decided that the law must take its course and John Gilmore was executed in Belfast Jail on the 17th August 1894.

Extracts from Fair Sheets on Ancient Topography by Thomas Fagan, written in May and June 1838, in Volume 16 of the OS Memoirs tell us about some of the finds made throughout the parish.

"James Moore, farmer in Ballyhibistock, found a most curious brass arrowhead about 6 inches in length, much smaller than the smallest brass spearhead, having four very sharp wings or edges, and in a very good state of preservation. It was found one foot underneath the surface in the earth in the same townland, on his farm about 12 years ago, but sold it long since."

BALLYNAFEIGH

Area: 0.38 square miles, 242.34 acres

Origin: Irish Baile na Faithche meaning 'townland of the green'

1669 Hearth Money Rolls spelling Ballynefaith

Bordered by Mostragee to the north, Livery Upper to the east, Livery Lower to the south, and Carncullagh Upper and Stranocum to the west. Stranocum lies in the parish of Ballymoney.

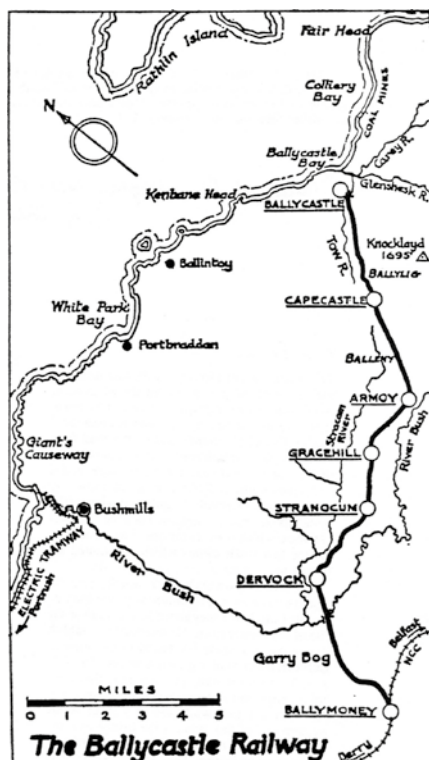

Ballynefaigh, colloquially know as Bel-na-fie, straddles the Ballinlea Road as it rises from Stranocum. Stranocum railway station, which served the Ballymoney to Ballycastle narrow gauge railway, once stood along the Mostragee Road. Just south of the station there was a railway bridge. The Ballymoney to Ballycastle railway service opened in 1880 and was discontinued in 1950.

The OS Memoirs leave an invaluable record for anyone with an interest in local history and also give a snapshot of some of the people living in the area.

"The 2 stone hatches were found in 1837 by Robert Craig, Ballynefaigh, on his farm, see specimen. From Robert Craig, farmer. 27th February 1838."

"In 1837 Hugh Craig found the oar of a boat 2 feet 7 inches long by 5 inches broad at the paddle, of oak; found in a flow bog on his farm, townland Ballynefaigh, 4 feet under the surface, see specimen. 12th March 1838."

THE BALLYCASTLE RAILWAY

The Ballymoney to Ballycastle narrow gauge railway, opened in 1880, carried passengers and goods through the North Antrim countryside, with the seventeen-mile journey, passing through stations at Dervock, Stranocum, Gracehill, Armoy and Capecastle, taking upwards of an hour. Plans in the 1880s to extend the Portrush to Bushmills railway to Dervock never materialised. The Ballycastle railway, which at one time carried over 85,000 passengers annually, suffered from the decline in rail traffic in the 1940s, eventually closing in July 1950.

BALLYNARRY UPPER

Area: 0.3 square miles, 191.0 acres

Origin: Irish Baile na Rígh meaning 'town of the kings'
Baile an Airimh – 'town of the ploughman' (1832 John O'Donovan OSNB)

Bordered by Ballydivity and Ballyhibistock Lower to the east, Ballyhibistock Upper and Deepstown to the south, Ballynarry Lower to the north, Ballyhunsley North to the west and Seneirl to the west. Ballynarry Lower is in the Parish of Billy, and Ballyhunsley North and Seneirl are in the Parish of Dunluce.

The stretch of the River Bush accessed from Denny's Road produced many fine fish - to local anglers a fish meant a salmon, while a trout was a "trout". There was no finer fish than one caught by the late Alec Horner, an expert angler. Many of Alec's brother anglers had encountered this leviathan and had lost lures of various type, size and hue when this "baste o' a thing" had "wrecked" them.

Getting wrecked was a local term for losing fish, tackle and a good deal of river credibility in one fell swoop. Such was the reputation of this fish as a wrecker that Alec felt he had better show his contemporaries how to deal with him. So Alec went straight to where the last encounter with this fish had taken place, – "he tain me on the third throw, an' he tain monies a kersheer I run the brews wae 'im for a guid wee, he tain rips at it an' then he lay quate but he tired at the finish an' I finally got 'is heid up, an whun I sliped 'im ontae the brew he minded me on the tinker Sweeney, they wur that much tin-weer strung roon 'im."

For those not familiar with 'local speak' the story loosely translates as "the fish took the lure on the third cast over the river, and many a run for freedom the fish took as he and Alex ran up and down the banks of the river for some length of time. The fish then lay quiet until it finally tired, and Alex got the fish to raise its head in surrender. When he took the fish from the water there hanging on its body were spoons, flies, and hooks of every description. So much so, that Alex thought the fish resembled a traveller's accoutrements jacket.

BALLYRATAHAN LOWER

Area: 0.21 square miles, 133.78 acres

Origin: Irish Baile Ui Raiteachain meaning 'O'Rattaghan's townland'

c1659 Census spelling Ballyratachan

Bordered by Dervock to the south, Ballyratahan Upper and Carnaff to the west, Knockanvullan to the north, and Aghancrossy and Ural to the east. Ural lies in the parish of Billy.

At the top of Knowe Head Street stood the Laurels, where the Bleach Green used to be, known locally as 'The Walls' due to the two stout walls on either side to prevent the surrounding soil from flooding the road.

There were four houses there and one of them was occupied by the McArthur family. Kennedy Kane McArthur was the local postman before he emigrated to South Africa, at the age of 20, in 1901, where he joined the police force. Kennedy had developed a love for running as a youth, but he did not take up professional sport until he arrived in South Africa. Described as the "golden boy" of the 1912 Olympics, McArthur won his first, and only, gold medal in the marathon run, setting a new world record. His sporting career was brought to an abrupt end the following year when he was involved in an accident, when his foot was crushed under a cart wheel when he was alongside it speaking to the driver.

At the top of Church Street stands St Colman's Church of Ireland built in 1831 and named after St Colman who is supposed to have founded the ancient church at Derrykeighan. The church was built on an Irish acre of land provided by George Macartney, who was pleased that the church had been moved from Derrykeighan to his village of Dervock, which he was developing at the time. For some years only those granted permission by Macartney could be buried in the churchyard. The builder, Hans Wood, is said to have fallen to his death from the tower just before the church was completed.

BALLYRATAHAN UPPER

Area: 0.34 square miles, 214.82 acres

Origin: Irish Baile Ui Raiteachain meaning 'O'Rattaghan's townland'

1669 Hearth Money Rolls spelling Ballavafagan

Bordered by Ballyratan Lower and Dervock to the east, Stroan Upper to the south, and Knockanboy and Carnaff to the west.

Amongst the wealth of information included in the OS Memoirs we get an insight into the industry in the parish in the 19th century.

"Brick-making has lately commenced in the townland of Ballyratan Upper. The understratum of the bog is found to be a clay well adapted for this purpose, and the discovery is likely to be of vast utility to the neighbourhood."

Along the Knock Road, previously known as the Ballymoney Road, stands the William Pinkerton School, which opened in 1953. Reverend Hugh McNeill, M.A., gave us an insight into local education in his book The Annals of the Parish of Derrykeighan, published in 1910, some 17 years after his death. Rev. McNeill was the rector of Derrykeighan Church of Ireland from 1876 until 1893.

"About 1810 Mrs Quigg had a school in Dervock, near the old market-house, and another school was held in Carncullagh session-house, taught in succession by Mr Macarthur, Mr John Henry (in 1814), Mr Morning, and Mr Hunter. This school ceased when Dervock schoolhouse was built in 1828."

BEERHILL

Area: 0.10 square miles, 62.77 acres

Origin: UNCERTAIN

c1657 reference Carncoge in Hibernia Regnum barony maps but may reference the English surname 'Beer'

Bordered by Carncoggy to the west, Derrykeighan to the east and Lisconnan to the south.

Causeway Safari Park was a unique attraction in Northern Ireland, drawing visitors from across the province and further afield. The Safari Park opened about 1970 and was home to lions, tigers, chimpanzees and many other animals - where else in Ulster could folk settle down at night with the cries of the African jungle resounding through the darkness. Its most famous resident was Peter, the smoking chimp. He was also quite an accomplished escape artist who managed to escape from his cage not once, but twice! The park employed three full-time staff and about 40 workers during the summer season; Davy Liggett worked as a keeper there for 26 years and showed no fear when working with the big cats and other dangerous animals. However, he was incredibly brave when a young lad Murphy, from Ballybogey, who worked at the Safari Park was attacked by a lion. As the lion was closing its mouth round young Murphy's head, Davy jumped out of his Land Rover, kicked the lion and shouted at the rest of the pride, which were coming running over. In the split seconds lent to him, Davy scooped the young lad into his vehicle and took him to safety.

By the mid-1990s the park was in serious financial difficulty and faced closure. The site was taken over by the U.S.P.C.A. and the animals were rehomed.

BELLISLE

Area: 0.44 square miles, 280.7 acres

Origin: English 'Beautiful Island'

1669 Hearth Money Rolls - Inchgrane

Bordered by Carncullagh Lower to the west, Carncullagh Middle to the north, Carncullagh Upper to the east, Sloan Upper to the west, Ballyrobin and Cubbindal to the east, Kirkhills to the west and Roseyards to the south. Ballyrobin, Cubbindal, Kirkhills and Roseyards are in the parish of Ballymoney.

We again return to the OS Memoirs compiled in the 1830s:-

"There is a tract of bog in Belleisle townland which is particularly deserving of notice for its great depth,... and the more remarkable circumstances of there being a Danish rath or fort on it..." James Mitchell, farmer, Belish townland, 2 years ago found a gold ornament like the handle of a door or the hilt of sword, but sold it for 6 guineas."

The memoirs tell of a "very curious stone jar or bottle" James Anderson, a farmer in Carnaff townland had in his possession.

"James Martin of Islandhoe townland has a most perfect one of similar shape and dimensions which was found 40 years ago, 4 and a half feet deep in the flow bog in Belisle townland. The man's face on it is very perfect, with a very long beard and dated 1661. From James Martin and Robert McClelland."

CARNAFF

Area: 0.42 square miles, 271 acres

Origin: Irish Carn Damh 'cairn of the oxen'

Bordered by Ballyrathahan Lower and Knockavallan to the east, Coole and Glebe to the north, Derrykeighan and Lisconnan to the west and Ballyrathahan Upper and Knockanboy to the south.

From the OS Memoirs:

Carnaff School: "50 Protestants, total 50, all females; this is a female school under the London Hibernian Society, who occasionally grant it 1 pound; the scholars pay 2s 6d per quarter; established 1834."

"There was a fort of earth on the farm of Robert Nevin in the townland of Carnaff, near the Covenanting meeting house, but all demolished. A cove was also in the fort, but dug away, in the digging of which 4 silver coins of Edward IV was found, but all lost, 5 years ago."

Dervock Reformed Presbyterian Church sits on the 'Croft Heed', near the boundary between Carnaff and Knockavallan. A strong oral history tradition within the church remembered the suffering, both in Scotland and Ulster, that people were subjected to for their faith. One of Dervock's best-known personalities was the Rev R J McIlmoyle, M.B.E. Rev McIlmoyle, who was the minister from August 1904 until his retirement in May 1964, was awarded the M.B.E. for his services to agriculture. He was famous for his flock of pedigree Border Leicester sheep, which won prizes all over the British Isles. Because of his ready wit and amazing skills at giving talks at soirees in church halls and the like, his fame as an after-dinner speaker spread all over Northern Ireland. Indeed, when a local parishioner told him of a dead donkey left by the travelling people on the Old Stroan Road he promptly rang the council in Ballymoney to have it lifted. Someone there, who knew no better, tried to bandy words with his Reverence by saying "I thought, your Reverence that was more in your department." Without missing a beat Rev McIlmoyle replied, "Well you know, it is also part of my calling to inform the next of kin."

CARNCOGGY

Area: 0.30 Square Miles, 190.29 Acres

Origin: Irish Carn Cogadh 'cairn of the war'

1669 Hearth Money Rolls - Corcagy

Bordered by Ballyhibistock Upper and Derrykeighan to the east, Beerhill and Lisconnan to the south, and Benvardin, Deepstown and Shellfield to the west. Shellfield lies in the parish of Dunluce.

From the OS Memoirs:

"The Fairy hill is a small hill or mound about 50 perches south west of the line of road from Coleraine to Derrykeighan old church in the townland of Carncoggy, on the property of John Montgomery Esquire, but nothing remarkable about [it], as part appears to have been dug away. It was called the Fairy hill from its verdant appearance.

"A celebrated battle is said to have been fought on this hill or near it, but is not known by whom or when. Large quantities of human bones have been found here. From John Lyle, farmer."

A family by the name of Carson had their house burned down by the crown forces because of their support of the 1798 United Irishmen Rebellion - it was said that the meal and other foodstuffs smouldered for weeks in these covenanting houses. Many other Covenanting Presbyterian families suffered the same fate. These times were not based on the pure definition of Christian fortitude, or indeed forgiveness.

Coleraine Chronicle carried a report that on the 31st August 1940, "Mr George McKelvie, Main Street, Dervock, set up a fine record for flax pulling on the farm of a Mr James Millar, Carncoggy, Dervock. In nine hours he pulled forty-one stooks of flax. In the past four weeks – he has pulled nearly 500 stooks." [A stook consisted of a number of sheaves set upright in a field to dry with their heads together]. George was known to use his skill charitably, at times stepping in to help older people and women, thereby 'pulling them out' and protecting their meagre earnings.

CARNCULLAGH LOWER

Area: 0.30 square miles, 193.16 acres

Bordered by Aghancrossy and Urbal to the north, Dervock and Sloan Upper to the west, Bellisle to the south, and Carncullagh Middle and Ballynagor to the east. Urbal and Ballynagor lie in the parish of Billy.

CARNCULLAGH MIDDLE

Area: 0.17 square miles, 106.75 acres

Bordered by Carncullagh Lower to the west, Bellisle to the south, Carncullagh Upper to the east and Ballynagor to the north. Ballynagor lies in the parish of Billy.

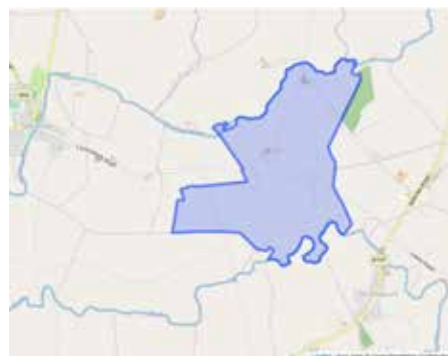

CARNCULLAGH UPPER

Area: 0.67 square miles, 431.35 acres

Origin: Irish Carn Colla – Colla may be interpreted as 'great lord, chief' and the name survived in Antrim down to the late 19th century, especially among the MacDonnells

Bordered by the Ballynafeigh, Mostragee, Moycraig Lower and Stranocum to the east, Ballynagor to the north, Bellisle and Carncullagh Middle to the west, and Ballyrobin to the south. Ballynagor and Moycraig Lower lie in the Parish of Billy and Ballyrobin and Stranocum in the parish of Ballymoney.

A tombstone was raised from the floor of the old church at Derrykeighan after it was pulled down in 1831, inscribed "Heir lyeth the corpis of ane faithful sister in the Lord calid Margrat Boyd, dochter to Archibald Boyd of Carncolach and sumtym wyf to William Huchsoun of Stronocum, who desist the 01 of June 1625."

In 1642, Dervock was a military station in charge of a Scottish regiment, whose chaplain ministered to the Presbyterian settlers round about. It was in this way the congregation was formed. In 1646 the first Presbyterian church in North Antrim was established here and the Reverend John Baird, who was the chaplain to the Earl of Argyll's regiment, was installed as the first minister. At first the congregation met for worship in the Parish church, but being deprived after some time of the use of the building, worship was held in a very humble house of mud and stones situated near the Stracarn River, about a mile due north of where the church is now built. Reverend Baird was succeeded by Reverend Robert Stirling, who was in turn succeeded by his son, Reverend Thomas Stirling, who ministered from 1703 – 1719. It was during this period, that the church was moved from its site by the riverside to the field opposite, where it now stands. The church was renovated and rebuilt over the years and a church hall, one of the first in the Presbytery, was erected in 1888.

"There is a Presbyterian meeting house now building on the site of the former one in the townland of Carncullagh ... It will probably accommodate 800 persons ... It will cost about 800 pounds."

"William McFadden of Carncullagh Lower townland has an ancient prayer-book, which is interleaved with manuscript written in a curious hand, printed in 1574, author Thomas Vantrollerius, see specimen. 1st March 1838."

CARNFEOGUE

Area: 0.46 square miles, 297.59 acres

Origin: Irish Carn Fiog 'cairn of the rushes' (it is also possible that feogue refers to a personal name)

1669 Hearth Money Rolls - Carnfioge

Bordered by Carracloghy to the north, Iderown and Moycraig Lower to the west, Drumcrottagh to the south, and Tullybane and Clontyfinnan West to the east. Clontyfinnan West lies in the parish of Loughguile, Moycraig Lower in the parish of Billy, and Iderown in the Grange of Drumtullagh.

From the OS Memoirs:

"There is a standing stone on the farm of John Jameson in the townland of Carnfeogue, ... It is 4 feet high by 1 foot 7 inches broad and 1 foot thick. It was much higher, but some years ago about 4 feet was broken off the top. From John Jameson and James Boyland."

"Ephraim McMullin of Carnfeogue townland about 20 years ago found 5 sticks like the oars of boats, each about 4 feet in length, all piled together, standing upright 2 feet deep in a flow bog in the same townland, but all lost. From Ephraim McMullin, farmer."

CARRACLOGHY

Area: 0.24 square miles, 154.23 acres

Origin: Irish Cora Cloiche 'weir of the stone or stony weir'
1669 Hearth Money Rolls - Carrologhly

Bordered by Carnfeogue and Iderown to the west, Tullybane to the south, and Clontyfinnan East and Gracehill to the east. Iderown lies in the Grange of Drumtullagh, and Clontyfinnan East in the parish of Loughguile.

The OS Memoirs not only give us a glimpse of the people they also show how the spelling of the names of the townlands varied.

"There is also a cove with rooms turning off at right angles on the farm of William McConaghy, townland Carrackoghy, but closed up. From William McConaghy, farmer."

CHATHAMHALL

Area: 0.30 square miles, 189.59 acres

Origin: of uncertain origin. The earliest form appears as Balliloshe in the Hibernia Regnum, a set of barony maps of Ireland dating to 1655-59. The English name Chathamhall first appears in the Ordnance Survey Name-books compiled during the Ordnance Survey in 1827-35.

Bordered by Carnkirn to the north, Gracehill to the west, Ballybregagh to the south, and Mullaghduff and Knocknahinch to the east. Carnkirn lies in the parish of Grange of Drumtullagh; Ballybregagh and Knocknahinch are in the parish of Loughguile.

Chathamhall also gives its name to a Masonic Lodge in the townland. Chatham Hall Masonic Lodge No. 152 was granted a warrant on the 7th June 1810. The present hall was built in 1933 and an old foundation stone built into the present building has on it Chattim Hall. Sam Henry's Songs of the People includes Mullaghdoo which tells of Hugh Fulton who emigrated to Nova Scotia finishes -

*The night he took his last farewell
Of Chatham boys, his favoured few -
Our master's name was Dan McKay -
He says, 'A charge I leave wi' you:
Now, brave McKay, as you pass by
Wi' fifes and drums and colours blue,
The more my face you ne'er shall see;
Play "Auld Lang Syne" for Mullaghdoo.*

COOLE

Area: 0.36 square miles, 230.39 acres

Origin: Irish An Chuil 'the corner/angle'
c1659 Census - Cull

Bordered by Carnaff, Glebe and Islandhoe to the west, and Lisnabraugh and Toberdoney to the east. Toberdoney lies in the parish of Billy.

Local historian, the late Alex Blair, noted that the congregation of Toberdoney Presbyterian Church was one of the last two Seceder congregations in the United Kingdom, only joining the Presbyterian General Assembly in June 1956. The church was built at the Cross Roads of Toberdoney in 1813, by Rev. James Bryce of Killaig, Coleraine, who was an "Auld Licht" Anti-Burger Seceder minister. It belonged to the Scottish Synod of Protesters, before joining the Original Session Synod, being part of the Presbytery of Ayr.

A tablet above the door of Toberdoney Presbyterian Church states: The Foundation of the church was laid in the Year of our Lord 1813, for which R Tenant, M.D., of Belfast, gave £10. Dr Tenant's father was the Rev John Tenant, first Seceder minister in North Antrim, ordained at Roseyards on the 15th May 1751.

DEEPTOWN

Area: 0.13 square miles, 80.30 acres

Origin: uncertain – likely of English origin. The name first appears in Lendrick's map of County Antrim in 1780.

Bordered by Ballyhibistock Upper to the east, Carncoggy to the south, Ballynarry Upper, Ballyhunsley South and Shellfield to the west. Ballyhunsley South and Shellfield lie in the parish of Dunluce.

In the early part of the 19th century John Millar of Deeptown worked for Mr Samuel Allen of Lisconnan House. He summed up his son Willie's occupation by saying "nae work and plenty o' money," and when he told his employer that Willie was away to learn "a powerful trade," little did either of them know that Wee Willie's occupation was going to be a highwayman. It is believed that Willie went off to join a gang which was terrorising North Antrim at that time. There were three tests for a highwayman in those days – firstly, to steal a horse out of a stable with the stableman present, secondly to take a horse from the plough while the ploughman was in charge of it and thirdly to remove a sheet from a bed in which a couple had been sleeping.

Wee Willie had the audacity to test his skills at Lisconnan where his father worked. He bought a bottle of whiskey in Ballymoney which he then shared with the stableman, meaning he had little trouble in taking away the horse. For his second test Willie had a number of accomplices ready to release some rabbits in a field which was being ploughed. When the ploughman saw the rabbits, he took off after them and returned to find one of his horses missing. In preparation for the third task Willie stole the corpse of an old man who died near Dervock which he then used in an elaborate plot to successfully acquire the final proof of his ability as a robber.

It is said that Willie Millar went on to accumulate a vast amount of money before he was finally "run down" by the authorities, hiding in a turf stack in the Garry Bog. He's supposed to have buried his treasure there – "At noon you will find a tree in the Garry Bog whose shadow points straight to the lime quarry on the slopes of Knocklayde at Capecastle. Then twelve steps behind that tree is Millar's crock of gold."

DERRYKEIGHAN

Area: 0.25 square miles, 161.44 acres

Origin: Irish Doire Chaochain 'Coachan's oak-wood'

Bordered by Ballyhibistock Lower, Ballyhibistock Upper and Glebe to the north, Beerhill and Carncoggy to the west, Lisconnan to the south, and Carnaff to the east.

Derrykeighan has associations with the United Irishmen. It was here that John Nevin, of Kilmoye, a member of the Ballymoney Volunteer Company raised in 1784, by John Leslie of Leslie Hill, drilled his insurgents in a field known as "the Drilly Knowe."

Private John Meeke M.M. is interred in the old graveyard in Derrykeighan. John Meeke, an Orangeman belonging to Benvariden L.O.L. No. 1001, was a stretcher bearer in the 36th Ulster Division. He was awarded the Military Medal for treating and rescuing the wounded Major Willie Redmond, of the 16th Irish Division, at Messines Ridge. Major Redmond's brother was John Redmond, the Home Rule advocate.

Derrykeighan has been the site of an ecclesiastical settlement since the 5th century when a church was founded by St Colman. The OS Memoirs give a description of the old church in 1831 and tell the story of the controversy surrounding the removal of the church to Dervock.

"The old church [of Derrykeighan] ... stands nearly east and west ... lit by a large Gothic window on the east gable and 3 flat, arch windows on the south side. The walls are of land and quarry stone and vary in thickness ... These walls were unroofed, 1831 ... Variation in their thickness is accounted for by remodelling the walls of the original church on the site at some former period ... The original church is said to have been roofed with oak timbers ... of the date of its erection or destruction no accurate detail at present can be obtained..."

"After the completion of the new church at Dervock, 1831, the former was pulled down and the roof and furniture sold by auction. The removal of the church to Dervock was many years in contemplation ... many full and troublesome meetings of the parishioners ... in consequence of the parishioners being divided into 2 parties, one of which was for the erection of the new church at Dervock and the other for retaining it on the old ground in Derrykeighan ... altercations on the subject ran so high that in order to destroy the old one altogether, some party unknown, about 12 years back, laid a match of powder beneath the flooring which, if ignited, according to design, would have blown the roof altogether off the church, together with destroying the furniture, but the match being laid in a damp passage leading to a vault beneath the floor, together with some broken panes in the windows, prevented its having the designed effect. However, it blew up and otherwise injured some of the pews..."

A version of where the townland got its name is told in the memoirs:

"Doratha Keighan, whose grave is said to be in the graveyard, was a rich, old lady and made a present of the glebe land and churchyard to the parish of Derrykeighan. Doratha is said to have been the first person buried in the graveyard, but it is not known where her grave is in the yard. Information obtained from Samuel Simpson and Dr Wilson. 19th March 1838."

DERVOCK

Area: 0.17 square miles, 111.71 acres

Origin: Irish Dairbheog [daravog] 'oak plantation'

Bordered by Aghancrossy and Ballyratahan Lower to the north, Ballyratahan Upper to the west, Sloan Upper to the south, and Carncullagh Lower to the east.

Knocklayde mountain can be seen from across the parish and in Seward's Topography of Ireland there is an "accurate description" of an eruption said to have occurred in May 1788. 'This remarkable phenomenon was preceded by a noise resembling a continued crash of thunder, and a column of fire and smoke burst forth and ascended about 60 yards into the air, followed by a shower of ashes and stones which extended a quarter of a mile round the hill. In about 45 minutes after the first shock a stream of lava poured out and rushed in a sheet of liquid fire about 60 yards in breadth down the fields ...' The story is also referenced in the poem 'Rathlin' by Thomas Beggs, where he describes how Dubh ni Valone (Sheelah Dubh ni Valone, the black nun of Bonamargy) uttered disturbing prophecies including, "Lands o'erwhelmed with watery peat, from black Knocklayde's bursting breast."

KNOCKLAYDE

I'll sing of a mountain, the pride of the north,
Its eminent qualities here to set forth,
To paint its true colours I'm almost afraid,
And it goes by the name of the famous Knocklayde.

Its base is extensive, its diameter wide,
And large its dimensions on every side
It would take a surveyor and good at his trade
To count up the acres contained in Knocklayde.

The best of pure limestone is here to be seen,
And grazing for cattle both fertile and green,
And turf good as ever was cut with a spade,
Abound in great plenty all over Knocklayde.

Pure transparent water gushes down from its side,
From which the whole country for miles is supplied,
Its streamlets uniting form many a cascade,
Which add to the beauty and fame of Knocklayde.

The county of Antrim for mountains can boast
From the falls near Belfast and for miles round the coast
And from Ballycastle all round to the Braid
There's none can compare with the famous Knocklayde.

At the foot of this mountain I'll sit down and sing
And call to remembrance one evening in Spring,
These days are long past, never more to return,
Those fine pleasant evenings that we did sojourn.

Knocklayde, from Sam Henry's Songs of the People.

DRUMCROTTAGH

Area: 0.39 square miles, 250.57 acres

Origin: Irish Droim Crotach 'hump-shaped ridge'

1669 Hearth Money Rolls - Drumrottoagh

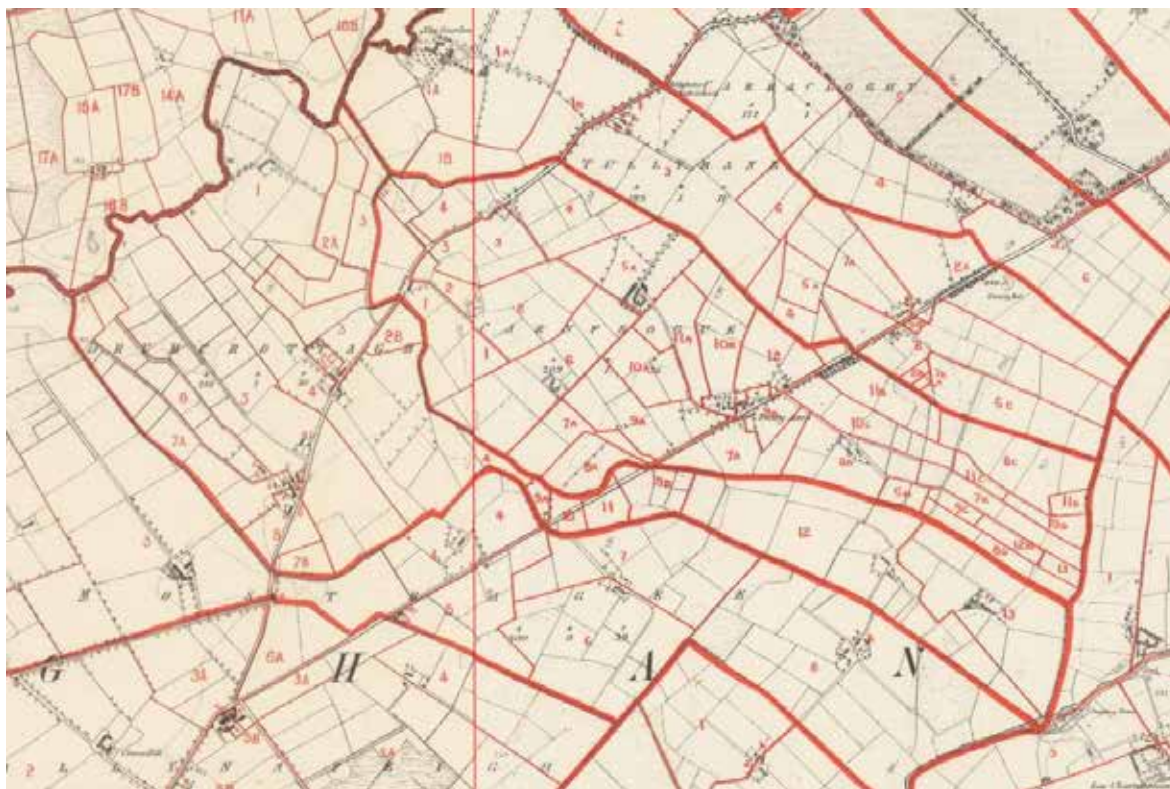

Bordered by Carnfeogue, Mostragee and Clontyfinnan West to the east, and Moycraig Lower to the west. Clontyfinnan West lies in the parish of Loughguile and Moycraig Lower is in the parish of Billy.

From the OS Memoirs:

"A curious stone, like crystal, nearly round and marked, about the size of a large nut, was found by Daniel McMullan, Drumcrottagh townland, on his farm in 1837.

"Robert McCauly, Drumcrottagh, found a most curious brass hatchet in the ruins of a lime kiln on his farm in 1837. 2nd March 1838."

GLEBE

Area: 0.06 square miles, 37.69 acres

Origin: English 'land belonging to/yielding revenue to a church'

c1659 Census - Maghereboy is likely derived from the Irish Machaire Bui 'yellow plain'

The term glebe refers to land set aside for the upkeep of the clergyman of a parish.

Bordered by Derrykeighan to the south, Carnaff and Coole to the east, and Islandahoe to the north.

Not a lot is known about the Craig of Vengeance mentioned in the OS Memoirs.

"There is a spot called the Craig of Vengeance directly opposite the Glebe House and on the west side of the road from Bushmills to Dervock. It is on the farm of William Colvin. The Cross hill is directly opposite the above and on the other side of the road. There is no distinct tradition as to what was the origin of the names of these places. It is believed they were from some bloody battle or massacre. The Craig of Vengeance is nothing more than a ploughed field."

GRACEHILL

Area: 0.27 square miles, 170.83 acres

Origin: English Grace (a personal name) + Hill – two early forms before Gracehill in 1827

c1659 Census - Carnanboy is likely derived from the Irish An Carnan Bui 'the yellow hillock'

Bordered by Carnkirk to the north, Chathamhall, Contyfinnan East and Ballybregagh to the east, Carracloghy to the south, and Iderown to the west. Carnkirk and Iderown lie in the Grange of Drumtullagh, Clontyfinnan East and Ballybregagh are in the parish of Loughguile.

The OS Memoirs tell of an ancient burial ground which was found in this townland.

"About 30 perches east of Gracehill House, in the same townland, a few perches from the stream which divides Carnkeeran from Gracehill and opposite the conspicuous fort in Carnkeeran, there was a remarkable keile or burial ground, but all demolished. Also 3 remarkable coves, convenient to the keile in the same field, with rooms turning off at right angles, but all closed up. From John Campbell, farmer."

ISLANDAHOE

Area: 0.43 square miles, 276.64 acres

Origin: Irish Oilean na hUamha 'island of the cave/souterrain'

Bordered by Coole, Islandrose and Toberdoney to the east, Glebe to the south, Ballydivity and Cloonty to the north, Ballyhibistock Lower, Ballyhibistock Upper and Derrykeighan to the west, and Glebe to the south. Islandrose, Toberdoney and Cloonty lie in the parish of Billy.

The Simpson brothers who bred very notable coursing greyhounds lived on a farm in the townland of Islandahoe. The most famous of these was a bitch called Sylvianna, winner of the Irish Cup in the 1907/8 coursing season. A photograph of this famous bitch hung in Paddy McCann's bar in Dervock for a long time. Robert and Thomas Simpson also bred a dog called Something Similar, reputedly the fastest greyhound ever bred in Ireland.

The OS Memoirs recorded on the "holding of Archibald McAlester stands a hill locally called Ranold's Hill, on top of which stands the ruins of a cairn or mound of earth & stones, which seem to have formed a circle 28 feet in diameter, but now much disfigured." The memoirs went on to say that in this cairn "stood a cave," this may have been the chamber of a megalithic tomb.

KNOCKANBOY

Area: 0.55 square miles, 349.45 acres

Origin: Irish Cnocan Bui 'Small Yellow Hill'

Bordered by Ballyrathan Upper; and Sloan Upper to the east, Sloan Lower to the south, Conagher and Lisconnan to the west, and Carnaff to the north. Conagher lies in the parish of Ballymoney.

Rev J O'Laverty, in his book An Historical Account of the Diocese of Down and Connor, Ancient and Modern, published in Dublin in 1878, said that before the Roman Catholic church was erected in Dervock "mass was celebrated in private houses in the town, but the landlord, George Macartney, threatened to evict any of his tenants who would permit mass to be celebrated in their houses. Samuel Allen, of Lisconnan, indignant at the bigotry of Macartney, sent for Father Denvir and gave to him a grant of the ground on which the church is now erected, at a nominal rent of 1 shilling a year for 999 years." The lease was executed in September 1835 shortly before the death of Mr Allen. Funds to build Our Lady and St John the Evangelist's Church were raised locally and in Liverpool.

John McNicholl was a local blind poet who lived in Knockanboy.

" THE DERVOCK PRIVATE STILL."

Some towns have got a factory and some a spinning mill,
But there are bags of money in the Dervock Private Still ;
The Dervock police looked in vain and searched around the town,
But the Still was out in over-time, and never could be found.
The other night the boys had got a heavy steep to run,
The still was merrily humming amidst the scrub and whin,
When " Police, Police !" came the call around the sheltered fire ;
To lose the steep and still was far from their desire.
Two boys ran out, met the police, and bumped into them fair,
One had a game bird in his hand, the other had a hare ;
They jumped the fence, then onward fled like a pair of frightened geese,
But they were quickly followed by the brave and bold police.
They ran through whins and rushes and over hill and dale,
But the Dervock police followed like blood-hounds on the trail ;
Before the chase was ended the cock crew loud and shrill,
And they knew the run was over at the Dervock Private Still.
A special court was held next day by an ancient magistrate,
He slowly wiped his glasses and rubbed his old bald pate ;
He says, " You are charged with poaching, and to prison you shall go,
The game is for the rich alone, while the poor may hunt the crow."
The Dervock lawyer, Piley Wright, had charge of the defence,
With great power and eloquence he did address the bench ;
He said, " Your Worship, noble sir, you must dismiss the case,
The police have no evidence but a long and weary chase."
The Sergeant said, " Your honour, me and my mate both swear
One had a large cock pheasant and the other had a hare ;
We caught the prisoners poaching, and put the law in motion,
And for our gallant bravery we shall get high promotion."
Then Piley says, " Produce the game, or else your charge withdraw ;"
The police brought a bantam cock and a hare-skin stuffed with straw ;
The court-house rang with merriment and the Justice laughed his fill ;
He knew the boys had led the " cops " from the Dervock Private Still.

KNOCKAVALLAN

Area: 0.32 square miles, 204.3 acres

Origin: Irish Cnoc an Mheallain 'hill of the little lump or heap'

Bordered by Ballyrathan Lower to the south, Urbal, Deffrick, Five Acres and Toberdoney to the east, Lisnabrough to the north and Carnaff to the west. Urbal, Deffrick, Five Acres and Toberdoney lie in the parish of Billy.

Many of those living in the parish of Derrykeighan were of Scottish Presbyterian stock and their religion was important to them.

"The Covenanters' meeting house in Knockavallan is a very plain building ... It was erected about 50 years ago and is thatched. It is in bad repair internally and not sufficiently commodious for the congregation. The sacrament is usually administered in the open field. It is intended to throw it down and rebuild it on a larger scale so soon as funds can be obtained for that purpose. It would accommodate about 300 persons." OS Memoirs

LISCONNAN

Area: 0.77 square miles, 494.07 acres

Origin: Irish Lios Conain 'Conan's fort'

Bordered by Carnaff and Knockanboy to the east, Conogher to the south, Carncoggy and Benvardin to the west, and Beerhill to the north. Conogher lies in the parish of Ballymoney and Benvardin is in the parish of Dunluce.

From the OS Memoirs:

"There is an ancient iron pot 9 inches in diameter at the mouth by 3 feet in circumference round the widest part outside, and 8 inches deep. The feet, 3 in number, are each 3 inches long. It was found by Alexander Christy in 1837 in the flow bog in townland of Lisconnan, 1 and a half feet deep, and is in his possession in the above townland but nearly all mouldered away."

Schools

Lisconnan; master Samuel Smith, an old man of 75 years of age, teaches 8 or 9 children in his own house.

Lisconnan; master M Crum, Methodist; free or pay school: not stated; number of pupils by the Protestant return: 3 other denominations, 9 Roman Catholics, 12 males; associations none.

The present Lisconnan House probably dates from the second half of the 18th century, although a building has stood on this site since the early 17th century, when the land was granted by the Earl of Antrim to Robert Fairlie. It was purchased by Samuel Allen in 1778, and the Allen family lived there until 1977. The family were generous benefactors; they built the Allen and Adair Hall and the rectory for St Colman's Church and also contributed to the building of the local Roman Catholic Church.

LISNABRAUGH

Area: 0.3 square miles, 191.39 acres

Origin: Irish Lios na Braiche 'fort of the malt'

Bordered by Carnaff and Coole to the west, Knockavallan to the south, and Toberdoney to the east. Toberdoney lies in the parish of Billy.

A circular crop mark indicates archaeological features which are most likely a ring-fort from which the townland got its name. In the 1832 OS Name-books, John O'Donovan, suggested the name may derive from Lios Albanach meaning 'fort of the Scotsmen'

From the OS Memoirs:

"There is also a number of coves on the farm of James Woodside, townland of Lisnabrough, with rooms turning off at right angles, but closed up. From Robert Nevin and James Woodside, farmers."

Working still captured by police near Dervock. Belfast Telegraph, 13 April 1937.

LIVERY LOWER

Area: 0.39 square miles, 248.99 acre

Origin: English refers to freehold land

Bordered by Livery Upper and Drumnafivey to the east, Ballynafeigh to the north, and Stranocum to the west. Drumnafivey lies in the parish of Loughguile and Stranocum is in the parish of Ballymoney.

LIVERY UPPER

Area: 0.4 square miles, 256.56 acres

Bordered by Clontyfinnan West, Kingarriff and Mostragee to the east, Ballycregagh Lower and Drumnafivey to the south, Livery Lower to the west, and Ballynafeigh to the north. Clontyfinnan West, Kingarriff, Ballycregagh Lower and Drumnafivey lie in the Parish of Loughguile.

From the OS Memoirs:

"There is a giant's grave in townland Livery Lower, on the property of James Hutchinson Esquire ... The grave runs east and is 19 feet long by 3 feet wide and 3 feet high, is of earth with a few stones, in the planting called Andrews Grove. From Robert Stewart and David Davison. 16th March 1838.

"Daniel Crawford of Ballymacfin found an ancient wooden vessel hollowed out of a solid piece of timber in a bog in the last mentioned townland [Livery Lower] about 18 years back. It approached to oval shape and would contain above 4 bushels, but quite decayed when lifted. Informants John Wright, John Bullion and others. 31st May 1838.

"An ancient castle is said to have stood in the townland of Livery Lower, a short distance nearly south of Bushbank House, on the property of James Hutchinson Esquire. Stones and mortar is said to have been found on the bank where it stood, but not a trace of it remains now to be seen."

"In 1832 Lawrence McGarry of the townland of Livery Upper found a wind musical instrument of wood, in shape like the tin horns now in use in farmhouses to call home the labourers ... 4 of them have been found in the same place at the same time ... The 2 smaller ones are supposed to have been joined together and anciently called musical pipes, and was used as such for 2 years after they were found by the boys near Stranocum, but are now all lost. They were found 4 feet deep in a flow bog ... Each of the 2 long ones was 2 feet long. From Lawrence McGarry, rope maker. 13th March 1838."

MOSTRAGEE

Area: 0.47 square miles, 301.33 acres

Origin: Irish Maistreadh Gaoithe 'swirling of the wind'

Bordered by Ballynafeigh, Carncullagh Upper and Moycraig Lower to the west, Drumcrottagh, Livery Upper, Clontyfinnan West and Kingarriff to the east. Moycraig Lower lies in the parish of Billy, Clontyfinnan West and Kingarriff are in the parish of Loughguile.

From the OS Memoirs:

"Mr Robert Haltridge, gentleman farmer, Mostragee townland, has a very large and perfect sword of bronze, 2 feet long by 1 and a half inches broad in the broadest part of the blade, found in the townland of [Mostragee?]."

"There was an old graveyard or keile on the farm of Robert Haltridge, Mostragee townland, in which a quantity of coffins and human skulls and bones were found, and old coins; but not a trace of it remains to be seen now."

About 15 years ago Robert Haltridge of Mostragee found a stone jug containing the bones of an infant, near the old graveyard on his farm, but the jug is lost. From Mr Robert Haltridge."

MULLAGHDUFF

Area: 0.23 square miles, 144.66 acres

Origin: Irish An Mullach Dubh 'the black hilltop'

Bordered by Chathamhall, Carnkirn and Lismorrity to the west, Knocknahinch to the south and Mullaghduff (Little) to the east. Carnkirn and Lismorrity lie in the Grange of Drumtullagh, Knocknahinch is in the parish of Loughguile and Mullaghduff (Little) is in the parish of Armoy.

From the OS Memoirs:

"Mary McNeely in Mullaghduff townland, in 1837 discovered in a bank in the same townland 25 silver coins of shilling magnitude, all of Elizabeth and Philip and Mary. Found all lying in a heap in the ground (see specimens with Mary McNeely), on the road leading from Stranocum to Armoy. From Mary McNeely. 6th March 1838."

Mickey Doran grubbin' (grubbin' was the process of breaking up the soil prior to sowing of crops).

STROAN LOWER

Area: 0.24 square miles, 154.77 acres

Origin: Irish An Sruthan 'the stream'

Bordered by Conogher to the west, Kirkhills to the south, Sloan Upper to the east and Knockanboy to the north. Conogher and Kirkhills lie in the Parish of Ballymoney.

STROAN UPPER

Area: 0.4 square miles 256.27 acres

Bordered by Dervock and Bellisle to the east, Ballyrathan Upper to the north, Knockanboy and Sloan Lower to the west, and Kirkhills to the south. Kirkhills lies in the parish of Ballymoney.

The southern boundary of Stroan Lower and Stroan Upper is marked by the River Bush which is likely to be the river referenced in the townland names.

From the OS Memoirs:

"Another remarkable vessel of wood, like a meddar, containing old butter, was found 16 years ago in a flow bog in Stroane townland by James Dabin, but lost. Also a wooden can was found 20 years ago near the fort on his farm in the same townland, but also lost."

"A remarkably large flint arrowhead, 5 and a half inches in length (supposed to have been 2 inches longer) by 3 inches broad at the wing, is in the possession of William Smith, farmer, in the townland of Stroane, and was found by him in a field near the fort on his farm about 40 years ago. From William Smith. 5th March 1838."

CHAPTER 3

DERVOCK VILLAGE

DERVOCK VILLAGE

Area: 0.18 square miles, 115.36 acres

Origin: Irish An Tulaigh Bhan 'the white hillock'

The village takes in parts of several townlands, including Ballyratahan Upper and Lower, Dervock and Knockanboy. Straddling the Straham River, also known as the Black Water River and the Dervock River, the area has been a place of occupation since early times. The first hunter-gatherers possibly crossed the river here, on the stepping stones nature provided at the ford in the river, as they moved through the bog lands and heavily wooded areas in search of food. When travelling through Dervock, sometimes noted as Aberdoey, Richard Dobs, in his account of the roads of the County Antrim, written in 1683, mentions a road from "Clogh Mills by a little town called Dervoge, with a fair stone bridge over Dervoge water, by Derrykyghan, and so to Bushmills ..." he commented on an "old, high arched, good stone bridge" across the river. The original "old, high arched, good stone bridge" was replaced in 1840. The river contains many fishing holes with names such as the Plum, the Loops, Kilpot, the Thorny hole, McKeeman's Block, Kelly's Ford, Liggot's Hole and Martha's Puddle being just a few.

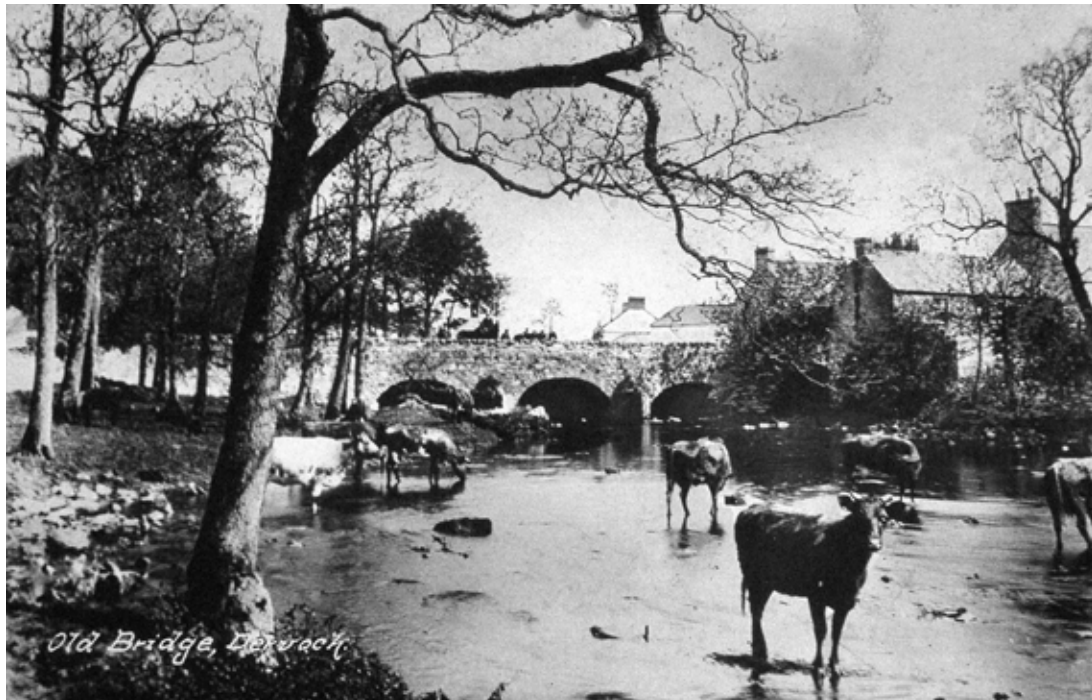

Earl George Macartney bought Lissanoure estate, including the village of Dervock in 1741. He desired to make Dervock the major market town in the area, and when he rebuilt much of the village many of the old buildings were demolished. In days gone by Dervock had five very successful fairs per year and was renowned for the horses, which formed the main part of the livestock sales. The linen industry was important in the area and during the flax season sales were held every fortnight. However, it never caught its nearest neighbour, Ballymoney, to become the main market town. The work undertaken by Macartney to improve the lives of his tenants by building houses and slating them with Scottish slate meant that many of those old houses lasted well into the 20th century.

Dervock Village.

A memorial fountain to a later Macartney stands in the middle of the village suitably inscribed "in memory of George Travers Macartney by a tenantry who deeply deplore his loss to them as an indulgent landlord and a kind friend."

Horse racing, the training of greyhounds for coursing and racing, and dog fighting were common pastimes in the past. Many famous dogs that went on to bigger and better things were reared here. The Route Hunt harriers were quartered in the village until the 1840s with Billy Faddis the huntsman.

The Old Bridge.

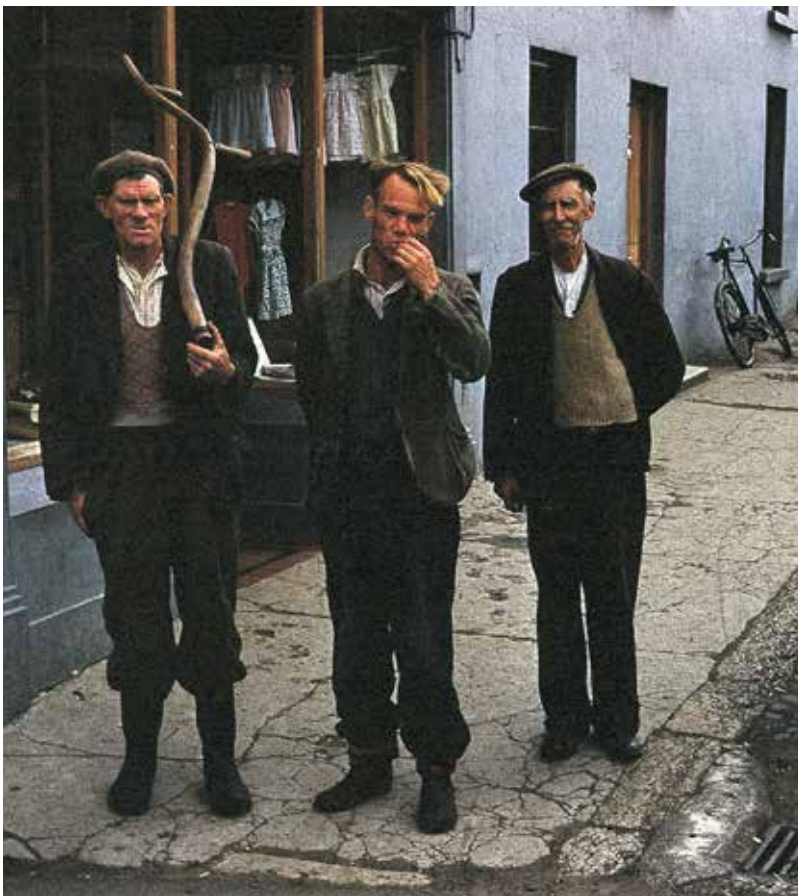

Know Head Street, Dervock.

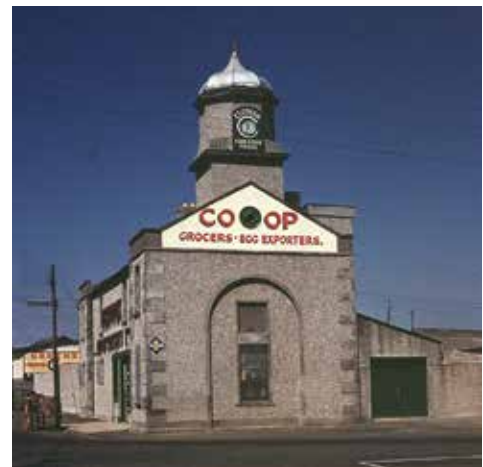

A police station was introduced in Dervock in 1824, supplemented by a revenue officer or gauger. Around this time Dervock boasted ten public houses and numerous shebeens, a brewery and two distilleries – all of which were monitored by the 'Blue Ribbon Temperance Society' who made their appearance in the parish around that time. Indeed, these worthy ladies had the "airt o their trade" to control alcohol consumption as the men in the village could disappear as quickly as any game fowl that was foolish enough to break cover. A malt house was also established, so whiskey selling at eight pence per pint, and ale and beer as cheap as water, was a good incentive to be happy and content. As a local was to say at a much later date when first drawn to the sweet taste, "I wish mae thrapple wis a mile an' a half lang soes I could taste it the whole wye doon." When the dreaded gauger eventually caught up with them and prohibited the production of their own fairy moonshine and it went scarce, they had no other option but to pay up and suffer. The same gentleman was again heard to say, "Boys, I dinnae min the price as lang as it disnae get scarce."

The bridge in Dervock, over the Straham River, was described in the early 19th century as "shaped like a rainbow, its arches being very much higher than the road at each side of it," by the Rev Hugh McNeill in The Annals of Derrykeighan (1910). It was lowered in 1840 to look much as it is today.

Dervock also had a working man's open-air 'university' - namely the "Brig." Gentlemen of the Brig, both first and second class, took their places from the Co-op corner right up to the Post Office corner, which was just at the top of the Mill Row.

Benders of the Truth, both first and second class - So far all of them but contrary to popular belief there were no poachers, makers of still, night time removal men, drunks or indeed fornicators in this district even to this present day. There was no "juking" or working illegally. But all the same, to those who were silly enough to work - well thanks was awarded and duly given.

CHAPTER 4

STORIES OF THE PEOPLE

ULSTER SCOTS – LANGUAGE & HUMOUR

The following article has been submitted by local poet, author, storyteller and advocate for the Ulster-Scots leid (language), Charlie Gillen.

Might I share with you one of my earliest memories of working for a living, and believe me, this encompassed quite a few diverse functions mainly due to my inability to settle at anything for long. That coupled with a naturally occurring flaw in me which hated taking orders, meant I was never far away from my P45.

Onyhoo, bak tae the wee lorry, a wee flet Commer wae a frame on hir an a cover drew ower hir tae keep the cargo dry. Me an the oul Commer lifted an laid, I'll explain, I lifted eggs fae wee farms al ower the place an delivered meal forbye, whiles the yin was subtracted fae the ither. An oul biskit tin lay in a holla on tap o the gearbox this hel the 'rid book' an whiles a brave 44elp o poun, an it joost lay there, fae dey tae dey, nether it nor the oul lorry had ony wye o lockin, they wur nae need.

As I sey, this 'run' wus tae wee farms, up oul roddens intae the heart o the moss or the mountain, the customers, ticht, healthy, hard wrocht country folk, me bein young thocht they wur anshient. Noo, on the doonhill side o fifty, I see them wae a diff'rent eye.

Twa o these dacent country folk wur the Misses McDermott, spinster sisters, for whutiver rayson they had niver tane the plunge intae matrimony. Yin – Cissy – a wee bar'l, the ither – Jane – as thin as the brander, wae personalities tae match. The wee pachel, rid face shinin, dane the bulk o the talking, 'the lang sombre craytur noddin whiles tae emphasise a point made bae hir sister.

Yin dey I land't in the yerd, an Miss Cissy, as I toul ye yin o them wus cried, ax't, "wud ye hae a pickle o Layers Mash on sin", sez I, "hoo much dae ye want?" "Hoo mony burds hae ye? Seys I. "C'mere tae I show ye," seys she, leadin the wye tae a hoose made fae Gallagher I wae azinc for a roof, an there wus twa dizzen wee pullets joost at point o lay. "Ir'nt they wee darlins," seys she, "I got them at Killygullib Seterdey by, dear eneuch, heth, but the picter o health," seys she. "Aye so!" seys I, "Whut about the male?" She left me tae cerry in the rest o the male an gane tae consult Miss Jane. She alloo't she wud start wae twa stane tae try them, so bae wye o' an anshent set o scales, she got hir twa stane, thoor usual order forbye an I bid guid dey tae Cissy an Jane.

Lo an behoul ye! Whun I appear't geen a fortnicht, Miss Cissy land't oot as cross as the divil, an wae a face on hir lake thunner, sez she, "your oul male's fer nathin mae boy."

Noo, I had niver sa' the wee wummin cross afore an wus kinna threw aff mae pad. "Ach! Noo, come come, Miss Cissy," sez I, "the male's the best whuts wrang onyweye." Sez she, "Them pullets knocked it in them lake sugar an naw an egg ootae yin o them, whut hell sort o sawdust is't I'm pyin for?" sez she, the wee rid face a brichter shade o rid than iver.

"It's naw the male Miss Cissy," seys I, "I doot ye wud need a rooster." "Whut for wud I want a rooster?" seys she, "they're eneuch nebs in that oul trash ye cry male as it is." I sa the falt streck awa but noo I wus in a corner, for it's ill for a gawl o a chap tae come oot wae some things in front o twa owl spinsters, but I sez, "noo them pullets is o the female gender," sez I, "an they need a rooster, for them an the rooster haes tae dae things, lake ye know, for them tae produce." Wae this Miss Jane cut in an sez she, "Cissy, Aw! Gochins Cissy!, he manes lake a bull or a boar or that." Weel the licht shone bricht, an Cissy blush't, or at laste I think she blushed, for hir face had tane on the luk o a weel skelp't erse an it wus ill tae see ony difference.

"Och! Young Gillyin ye'll think is quore owl fools," sez Miss Jane, "mae sister dinnae mean tae be ill bred wae ye, it's naw lake hir, sure ye'll naw tak tent o it, ach ye'll naw, yer a guid weecheel. We'll see ye geen a fortnicht," an wae hir erim roon me usher't me bae the owl Commer. Honest tae God, I dinnae know whether tae lach or greet, but I thocht personalities again, the talker scowl't an the thinker thocht, an wha won the dey, ye see, noo I hae nae room tae talk. But think lang an sey little seem't tae sum up the quate reserved Miss Jane. Weel, I land't whun the fortnicht had gane by, an afore I wus richt in the yerd I betae see a dizzen an a half roosters, they wur in rows on the midden, on the cert shafts, on a wee low wa fornenst the byre. In fect they wur iverywhur, crowin an boxin wae ither an streetchin their necks tae gar them luk as big as they cud.

Here twa owl dolls cam ootae the wee hoose an Cissy seys, "Ir ye still big wae me sin?" Seys I, "An why wud I naw be?" She gruppit me bae the sleeve, "c'mere tae I show ye this young Gillyin," still pooin me bae the sleeve intae the wee spotless kitchen, "there," seys she, "is that naw a picter?"

An she set forrit a big delph boul rim'fu' o' wee pullets eggs, seys she, "them roosters dane the trick." I seys, "heth they did, but less o them wud hae dane, a couple o roosters wud've been ony amount for twa dizzen pullets." At this Miss Jane cut in an seys, "sin, wait tae I tell ye a thing," an she smile't an wink't ahint hir sisters bak, "the mair me an oor Cissy neglect't oorsels that wye, we ir boun tae sey them wee pullets will naw suffer the same fate as is."

Flight of Fancy

Noo the name o' "Scumpy Campbell" is as yet naw worl' renowned,
But the wee man's soart a' famous in his hame o' Dervock town;
He's the soart o' handy boady wha hae's niver yit been "bate",
If your spootin's hingin' aff the wa' or the leg fa's aff yer sate.

But the greatest o' his triumphs I will noo tae you relate,
It started in the bar yin nicht, the oor was very late;
In the comp'ny o' a birdman wha wuz feelin' gye' perplexed,
The boadies pigeons niver won, an' he wus very vexed.

He say mae pigeons ey' get loast, an fly hame twa deys late,
Tae tell the truth ah'm scunner't, an ah'm fed up getting' bate;
Oh! He seys the burds can fly lake hell, they're as speedy as the rest,
But the dopey things ey' fly aff east whun they shud be heidin' west.

The barman seys, ye'll hae tae go, it's startin tae get clear,
And Scumpy bid guidnicht tae al', an' finished aff his beer;
But he pondered lang, an' scart't his heid about the pigeons plight,
An' as he strolled down Dervock street I believe, he sa' the light.

A flash of inspiration shot across the wee man's brain,
Sez he I hae this problem solved, I'll breed a brand new strain;
So with Jim McLaughlin's parrot an' a pigeon fac yer man,
A cross bred burd it was hatched oot, noo imagine if ye can.

A sort o' bluey, greyey thing, wae a bake joost like a hawk,
But "Scumpy" wasnae finished, he larn't this thing tae talk;
Noo Scumpy's Parra-Igeon many races it has flown,
An' whun the burd gets loast these days, it asks directions home!

Flight of Fancy by Charlie Gillen.

LOCAL NAMES

Throughout this book we've tried to include the names of as many people as possible from a variety of sources. The following article by Nevin Taggart is included here to show how names in North Antrim change between Gaelic, Latin and Middle English.

The 'Census of part of the parish of Billey, 1734' lists a Dan'I McCavish, a Dissenter, in one of the Moycraig townlands, probably Moycraig Upper. I asked my father if he'd ever heard that surname and he said that the late Vincent Thompson of Moycraig Upper was known as McCavish. There are several Thompsons in the parish in 1734 but just the one McCavish. It turns out that the name change is quite a simple one. McCavish comes from Mac Tavish which derives from the Scottish Gaelic Mac Tamhais, 'son of Thomas'.

The change from McQuilkin to Wilkinson is a similar one. The 'qu' changes to 'w' and the 'mac' moves to the right where it becomes 'son'.

The 18th century McCaigs of the Islands of Carnmoon are still represented in that townland but now use the McKaig form. This derives from the Gaelic Mac Thaidhg (Scottish Gaelic Mac Thaoig), 'son of Tadhg', a name meaning 'poet', 'philosopher'. McKaig brothers of the Islands were publishing poems a century ago so they were maintaining a family tradition.

The Irvines from the same townland changed their name to Irwin. When I saw the name Robert Irvin McKaig in a US family tree I immediately thought of the Islands of Carnmoon. It turned out that he was from just across the fields in Araboy Isle.

Hoggarts of Croaghbeg and Castlecatt became Howard. Mary Hoggart shares a burial plot in the old burying ground at Billy Parish Church with Thomas, Samuel and other Howards. The descendants of the McDuffee family in the same graveyard have switched their surname to McAfee.

Some folk will still refer to the Pollocks as Polk and to the Gaults as Gatt.

The variant spellings of the descendants of emigrants will sometimes give an indication of the era that they departed this northern shore.

A BIT O' NORTH ANTRIM WISDOM
SAYIN'	MEANING
A creakin' gate hings lang	Those who complain last longer
A rollin' stane gethers nae moss	A person who never stays long enough in one place to form attachments
Tha Lord sens claith accordin' tae tha coul	The Lord provides enough to keep you warm
Ye cannae sell the coo an' sup tha milk	You can't have your cake and eat it
Ye cannae sell the coo an' sup tha milk	You can't have your cake and eat it
Jump tha river whun it's yit a burn	Do what you have to do as soon as you can – in most instances it's usually easier
Whun sorra sleeps dinnae wauken hir	Don't go looking for trouble
Dae nathin' in haste bar catch flays	Take your time making important decisions
It's a lang lane wae nae turnin'	Wait long enough and you will get your revenge
Ne'er cast a cloot tae May is oot	Beware of false summers
There's mare than yin wye tae skin a cat	There is usually more than one way to do a job
Better an oul man's pet than a young man's slave	Age can be more thoughtful and considerate
Want o' wit is worse than the want o' wealth	The lack of common sense is worse than being poor
A fool may give a wise man counsel	There is no-one so stupid that a person can't learn something from them
He's naw worth twa bols a blue	A worthless fellow
Ye can paint a crow ony colour yae want tae but it's still a crow	A change of appearance doesn't change what you are
There'll come a day whun ye'll lick where it lay	You may think the food offered not good enough for you but some day you may be glad of the same
Dinnae rouse what ye cannae settle	Beware of the anger of a quiet man
Tha wolf nicht loos his teeth but naw his nature	Someone may have lost the ability to hurt you but it doesn't mean they no longer want to
Put a beggar man on horseback an' he'll ride tae hell	Some people who fall into better fortune quickly forget when they had less

1669 HEARTH MONEY ROLLS FOR DERRYKEIGHAN PARISH

The following information has been taken from the databases compiled by Bill Macafee on his excellent website, www.billmacafee.com. The table below gives the spelling of surnames in the Hearth Money Rolls. Bill Macafee has listed one possible spelling of the modern version of the surname on his website, however, this is not definitive and there may well have been other derivatives of the name. The spelling of some of the townland names recorded in the Hearth Money Rolls varied from the modern spelling and the original recorded spelling is given below:

FLAX GROWERS IN DERRYKEIGHAN, 1796

These lists were compiled as part of an initiative to encourage the linen industry. Spinning wheels and looms were awarded to people planting areas of flax, with people sowing at least one acre receiving four spinning wheels while those planting five acres were awarded a loom. The names for the parish of Derrykeighan have been transcribed from the information for County Antrim available on Bill Macafee's website (www.billmacafee.com).

1803 AGRICULTURAL CENSUS

These records were created after a planned insurrection in Ireland was aborted in 1803 and due to a possible threat of invasion by Napoleonic France. The following information is among 19th century records available on Bill Macafee's website (www.billmacafee.com).

THE BELFAST AND PROVINCE OF ULSTER DIRECTORY 1897

Dervock

Dervock is a post village, in the Parish of Derrykeighan, in the Barony of Lower Dunluce, County of Antrim, about five miles north-east of Ballymoney. It stands on a tributary of the River Bush, and on the leading roads from Ballymoney to Bushmills and Giant's Causeway, and Ballycastle. Liscolman Spinning Mill, which is situated about two miles out of the village, was built in 1839 by the Messrs. Allen, of Lisconnan, as a flaxspinning mill, and continued in the same trade by the late William Cowan, of Whiteabbey, and afterwards by the Whiteabbey Spinning Company, Limited, who at length sold out the wet spinning machinery, and the mill remained standing idle two or three years, after which it was bought by Mr. Samuel Craig, of Lisburn, and worked by him in the trade of dry spinning of flax and hemp tow, and making of nail bagging, as at present in operation. Petty Sessions are held on the first Tuesday of each month. The places of worship are – Church of Ireland, Presbyterian, and Roman Catholic. There are also two National Schools. Fairs are held on January 12th, February 23rd, May 16th, June 22nd, August 12th, and October 27th. The acreage of the Parish of Derrykeighan is 7,676. Population in 1891, 1,235. Village in 1891, 286.

1901 CENSUS

The following information is taken from the National Archives of Ireland website where the full 1901 and 1911 Census of Ireland can be found. There are also fragments of the Censuses of 1821 – 1851. The Census records are a valuable source of information, not only to those researching their own family history, but to anyone who has a social interest in the local area in days gone by and the people who lived there. In addition to name, age, sex, marital status, religion and occupation, they also tell us where (usually the county) the individuals were born. Literacy level, whether the Irish language is spoken and infirmities (deaf and dumb, dumb only, blind, imbecile or idiot, or lunatic) are recorded. The 1911 Census also records how many years the present marriage has lasted, children born alive and children still living. The Census of 1901 and 1911 are fully searchable on the National Archives of Ireland website.

Note: Spelling is recorded here as transcribed on the website.

1911 CENSUS

The following information is taken from the National Archives of Ireland website where the full 1901 and 1911 Census of Ireland can be found. There are also fragments of the Censuses of 1821 – 1851. The Census is a great source of information of immense value, not only to anyone researching their family history, but also to those with a social interest in the local area in days gone by and the people who lived there. We have included the basic information here – house number, surname, forename, age, relation to head of household, religion and occupation. Additional information available online includes birthplace, literacy, marital status, specified illnesses and speakers of the Irish language. The 1911 census also records number of years married, children born in the marriage and number of children still living. The Census of 1901 and 1911 are fully searchable on the National Archives of Ireland website.

Note: Spelling is recorded here as transcribed on the website.

Benvardin – Total 848; 414 male, 434 female. Read & write 685, read only 52. No Irish speakers.
Dervock – Total 1180; 591 male, 588 female. Read & write 905, read only 84. No Irish speakers.

THE GREAT WAR

This "Roll of Honour" appeared in the Northern Constitution on 11th December 1915. The men of Dervock and district continued to volunteer for service as the war continued and any of the men whose names are listed here were to make the supreme sacrifice before the war ended in November 1918. Many others returned with serious health problems due to the horrors they endured.

TOWNLANDS WRITTEN PHONETICS AND PRONUNCIATION

The Ulster Scots language is not heard as much today as it would have been in the past due to most of us having it 'knocked out' of us at school. Nevertheless, many of the old words are still in everyday use around the area. But life's never simple around Dervock, so just to add confusion to the pot the pronunciation can depend on who you're talking to and even when you're talking to them!

The pronunciation of the townlands in Dervock can be difficult to capture and decipher in the written spelling of the word, for example, the townland 'Mullaghduff' is pronounced as 'Mull-agh- 'doo'.

To help visitors find their way around the townlands in the parish, thanks to Carol Hunter, the following table includes the phonetic transcription alongside the orthographic spelling of the townland names and the pronunciation/phonetic spelling.

The pronunciation/phonetic respelling of orthographic (written) spellings of townland names in this table aims to aid production of the townlands as if spoken by a native speaker.

The phonetic transcription will provide and preserve a phonological account of the rich linguistic complexity of the dialect spoken in the region of the townlands around Dervock.

The audio recording for the townland names can be accessed on the Northern Ireland Community Archive website (<https://niarchive.org/>).
